CONFERENCE

Barcelona, 2027

Dear Colleague,

The 13th Liquid Matter Conference will take place in Barcelona, Spain, in 2027. Previous conferences were held in Lyon (1990), Firenze (1993), Norwich (1996), Grenada (1999), Konstanz (2002), Utrecht (2005), Lund (2008), Vienna (2011), Lisbon (2014), Ljubljana (2017), virtual (2021) and Mainz (2024). This series of meetings is organized by the Liquids Section of the Condensed Matter Division of the European Physical Society.

The aim of the conference is to bring together scientists and engineers working in the many facets of the liquid state, which today extends to complex fluids, as well as to soft and active matter. This rapidly growing field includes the physics, chemistry, biology, chemical and mechanical engineering of all liquid-related matter, and its many applications in, for example, the chemical, pharmaceutical, food and manufacturing industries.

The approaches include theoretical work, computer simulation and experiment. The interconnection between the three makes the conference especially appealing to companies, where they can promote equipment and techniques used by this vast scientific and engineering community.

The conference will consist of plenary lectures, topical symposia with keynote lectures and contributed oral presentations, and poster sessions. Time for interaction and exchange of ideas, around both the poster and exhibition halls, will additionally contribute to fostering a vibrant environment.

We hope you can contribute in any way to this fantastic conference and look forward to seeing you in Barcelona in July 2027.
